

THE ARMY OF MACKENSEN NEAR VILNA

SLAY CITY HIS PRACTICALLY IN-ESTED UPON THREE SIDES AND DOWNFALL PENS.

CUT RAILROAD LINES

Put One Road Remains Open Out of Enslaved City Imposing Necessity of Using Wagon Roads in Emergency.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Sept. 17.—The city of Vilna is now virtually invested on three sides. The troops of Field Marshal von Mackensen have reached a point near Gailich, Vitebsk, thirty-seven miles south-east of the city. The fall of Vilna would place in the possession of the Germans a considerable section of the railroad to Petrograd, a portion of which, between Dvinsk and Vilna, they already hold.

On the southern end of the battle line, the Russians continue to gain successes, the latest achievement being the capture of 1,500 men along the Stripa. Little activity is reported from the center line, where a readjustment is expected following Field Marshal von Mackensen's capture of Pinsk.

Reports that the Austrians and Germans have decided to initiate a new offensive campaign are multiplying, but there is little concrete evidence concerning the direction which it may be expected to take. Cabling from Berlin, several correspondents assert they have reason to believe the central powers have not only decided to strike a heavy blow, but have already put under way the preliminary military movement. The objective of the new campaign is generally believed to be either Italy or Serbia. Apparently there has not been any great concentration of troops along the Italian and Sava river.

Considerable activity has been disclosed along this front recently. Austrian attempts to cross the rivers have been checked, and according to reports from Nish, Serbian army has destroyed fortified works on the banks of the river. London's commissioner of police, in view of the possibility of further attacks on hostile aircraft, has issued a further warning to the people of the city, recommending that they remain indoors during any subsequent raid, and advising them to keep their homes ready for dealing with an emergency, a supply of water and food, which he regards as "the best, simplest and most economical safeguard."

Vilna Badly Menaced. The Germans have cut the railway between Vilna and Mlodziechowo and have ordered the rail from Vilna to be maintained in Russian hands. The running southward to Lida. The offices maintain, however, that the line is sufficient wagon roads to be used in an emergency. A decision concerning the retention longer of Vilna will be reached soon.

The Lida railroad line has been under sharp attack to the west ward of Lida.

Both battles were started by the Carranzistas, who fired on American troops. One took place between Matamoros, the Mexican town across the Rio Grande, three miles from here, and the other at Los Ebanos, fifty miles north and west of Brownsville.

As a result of the attack by Carranzistas on American troops serious international complications are feared. An entire battery of United States field artillery has been trained on Matamoros. On the first move from the Mexican side shells will commence to hurtle into the Carranza town.

General Nafarrete, the Carranzista commander at Matamoros, denies his troops were responsible for the fighting. In a statement he charged that American troops were the ones who fired without cause.

WAR HAS PROMOTED NEW ROAD BUILDING

Battalions of Turkish Army Do Much Road Building of Very Good Quality.

Constantinople, Sept. 18.—The extent to which the war has prompted good roads building in Turkey is indicated in a report just issued by the Ottoman ministry of war stating that 740 miles of roads have been graded, leveled and resurfaced with gravel, and 382 miles of roads have been made well done on the whole. Much care was taken in finding the best grades. Wherever necessary the embankments were relevelled, and no labor was spared in making cuts where they were necessary to a favorable grade. This is especially true of the roads built between Adrianople and Constantinople and those built in the Taurus and Amanus mountain regions. While the majority of the engineers and officers supervising the work were Turks, there were a few Armenians and Austrians.

Very little road-building machinery was used with the exception of a few steam rollers and small rock crushers. The roads were leveled by pick and shovel, and cuts were made in the same manner, although hand drills and blasting powder were used where ledges were encountered. Most of the crushed rock, tons of which were broken by hand, a task which some officers made easier by having a pipe keep the hammers in time with a whistle.

Those familiar with travel conditions in the Ottoman empire say that the country has never had so many good roads as at present. In addition to the new roads that have been built for strategic purposes, many miles of neglected roads have been put in repair, one such notable instance being the pass road through the Taurus range to Taurus.

Chief H. Klein received a telephone message of the fire shortly before eight, and after sounding the bell for call men, twenty minutes later Chief Klein that the fire was checked enough so that the department was not needed. If the call had not been sent that their services were unnecessary, the Janesville department was going to make the trip on a special train over the Northwestern railway.

Splendid Medicine Stomach Trouble

I Suffered for Several Years Peruna Restored My Health

Mrs. Elizabeth Reuther, No. 508 Twelfth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "I am pleased to endorse Peruna as a splendid medicine for catarrh and stomach trouble, from which I suffered for several years. I took it for several months and at the end of that time found my health was restored and have felt splendidly ever since. I now take it when I contract a cold and it soon rids the system of any catarrhal tendencies."

Over Ten Years Ago.
"I would not be without Peruna. Although it was over ten years ago that I first gave you my testimonial, I am of the same opinion as when I wrote it, and give you the privilege to use it as you see fit. I still use Peruna when I think it necessary. I am recommending it to my neighbors whenever a chance occurs."

I Still Praise Peruna.
Peruna is undoubtedly a splendid medicine for the stomach. A great many people after years of searching for a remedy finally try Peruna and are cured. This remedy is especially helpful in cases of weakness of the stomach. Those who prefer to take tablets instead of liquid medicines can get Peruna Tablets.

WILL TRY THE DIET CURE ON PRISONER

Herman John of Evansville in Solitary Confinement at the County Jail for Violation.

Turnkey William E. Wogan yesterday took into custody Herman John, the eccentric Evansville man who is now confined at the Rock county jail in solitary confinement on the "sufficient diet" of lots of water and not much bread. John brought about a heap of trouble upon himself on his inability to obey the commitment law. Some months ago John was arrested and arraigned in court for intoxication. He was fined and he pleaded with the court to allow him to go to Evansville on his honor and send back the fine. The court was willing, but did John ever send back the fine? He did not.

John was arrested again he begged the court that he be given the maximum sentence to be able to keep away from liquor. This time he got a year. A court order was issued to send him to work for a man named Miller and John was sent out with the parole contract receipt, which he never gave to the man who was to have hired him. Yesterday it was reported the Evansville man was off the wagon and he was found by Wogan in an alleged intoxicated condition on a farm six miles from Evansville. "For ten days he will stay sober anyway," remarked one of the county jail authorities this morning.

Marlin Yager of Beloit, was committed to the county jail from the Beloit court yesterday afternoon to serve a nine months' term for wife desertion. Yager will be paroled out on Monday, next week.

MAY SCHEDULE ANOTHER SERIES OF BALL GAMES WITH BELOIT FAIRIES

A second series between the Janesville team and the Beloit fairies may be scheduled if negotiations under way are successful tonight. The managers of the two nine are to confer over the proposal tonight and if good team can be secured to represent the city, equal to that which played in the two games at Beloit, the fans here are hoping that the series will be staged to close the baseball season.

GUND-GRAHAM COMPANY WILL SOON BE READY TO POUR ASPHALT.

Construction work on the pavement contract for Wisconsin and Bluff street by the Gund-Graham company will soon be ready for the pouring of the asphalt binder. On Bluff street the first course of crushed quarry stone has been put in and two blocks of granite chips spread. On Wisconsin street the foundation layer will be completed today. After the granite course the street is thoroughly rolled and graded before the asphalt is poured.

On Monday the street department expect to finish oiling the streets. The present weather continues. One good day and the oiling operations will be completed much to the relief of the city officials.

Work has been started on the storm sewer to be built on Magnolia avenue from Washington to Oak Hill avenue, a distance of about 250 feet. The sewer will be constructed of concrete and will be four feet in diameter.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Let me tell you something, comrade,
That I've learned along the way:
If the blessings that life brings you Seem as hardly won as counting, Since so small are they,
You can double them by sharing.
With the comrade next to you.

Have you heard a kind word spoken
To another in his need?
Tell your neighbor all about it,
And the little simple deed
Will make warm words in telling,
And the hearts of those who hear
Will be gladdened by the knowledge,
And their lives will share the cheer.

Oh, the little wayside blessings
That we treasure every day!
If we shared them each with other,
They would glorify the way.
They would grow, as 'neath the sunshine
Flowers in summer days unfold,
Till each one of them has blossomed
Into blessings manifold.

—Eben E. Rexford.

This little poem is full of good suggestions and they apply with equal force to all kinds of people. The good Lord who permitted us to come into existence, intended us to be social beings, and so He planned the home and laid the foundation for society.

It is an old saying that it takes all kinds of people to make a world, and the statement is as true as it is ancient. If all of these various kinds of people could be herded by themselves, the world might be a better place in which to sojourn, but this is not the order of things, and so we mix in the great melting pot, and pass through the ordeal, with varying results.

The only people that require separate herding are the defective and criminal classes, which represent but a very small percentage of the masses. The great rank and file of humanity enjoy liberty and freedom in the broadest sense of the term, and yet some of us go through life as glum as oysters, while others are filled with discontent that the atmosphere which they create is infected with the microbe of unrest.

Sociability is a natural endowment and it should be at its best in this free land where serfdom is unknown, and where every soul is a sovereign. The joy of living, under these favorable conditions, should inspire the heart with glad content and an overflowing sense of appreciation, especially at the present time when half the world is at war.

This awful war, by the way, has brought out some wonderful traits of character, and while brutality and bloodshed are written large in the history, there are other elements which mark humanity and the finer sensibilities in rare degree.

The New York Evening Post tells the story of a French reporter who was permitted to go to the front with his camera. When he found himself in the trenches a voice close to his ear said:

"Hush! Speak low! They are there, quite close, fifteen paces off, and they are watching. If, by mistake, one of our caps appears above the parapet of the trench, they fire; if one of us should move behind a loophole, they fire; the least noise, they fire. Be on the lookout!"

But I wished to get an idea of what could be seen of the enemy's line from our trench. I went to a loophole stopped by a plug of straw, which is only taken out after nightfall. Through the interstices I perceived nothing before me but an inextricable thicket of dead branches entangled with barbed wire. But the officers obligingly lent me a periscope, and then I was able to distinguish a little beyond the felled logs which protect the open space beyond our parapet, a slight rising of newly broken earth; it was the German trench.

At this point, the blond sub-lieutenant intervened, addressing his superior officer:

"Have you noticed, mon lieutenant, that, during the whole of this morning, the Germans have not fired a single shot at us? Perhaps the 'good' boys are on duty today!"

"Perhaps!" replied the lieutenant; "but last night it was the 'bad' boys. They kept sniping at us all the time. Have they been relieved already?"

I looked at the officers in natural bewilderment. What did they mean by "good" and "bad" boys? At my question, they smiled.

ades, rockets, shells, and other objectionables. Sometimes, however, a company of Bavarians would be stationed there, and on such occasions the difference was marked, these genial warriors usually leaving their opponents in peace when activity was not absolutely an essential. One of the officers in the reporter's trench decides to try if he may find out the disposition of the present force:

In the midst of a profound silence he began to whistle the first notes of a popular song, such as the students sing in the fine evenings of July:

Drumten im Unterland,
El! da ist's so wunderschön....
Then he stopped. We remained motionless. All at once—something surprising!—another voice rises, taking up the last notes of the song and finishing it:

El! da ist's so wunderschön;
Da mocht' ich, Jäger sein....
And this voice rises from the German trench. I can not believe my ears. However, just beside me, a soldier exclaims:

"Hullo! A German! That's the first one I've seen alive since the war started here. The periscope, the lieutenant scolds familiarly. "Do you want them to bombard us?"

"I see two now, mon lieutenant!" the soldier continues, turning a deaf ear to the scolding, "and one of them is wearing a green cap with something shining on it! He's a sport, all right!"

We all look toward the enemy's trench. With the periscope, I distinguish two German heads rising above the parapet of their trench. One of them is wearing a gray infantry cap with a red line on it; the other a gray-green cap of the machine-gunners.

The Germans on their side saw our imprudent soldier's blue cap. They called out good naturedly:

"Morgen, Kamerade!"
Other heads began to appear. I counted three, four, five. One of them was wearing a peaked cap, an officer.

They all wanted to be photographed and soon I had their pictures for which they expressed thanks. Then one of them came out and tossed toward us a package of cigarettes, which fell short of the mark. Then he stepped boldly out and handed them to us. Why do these men fight? They have no grievance, and yet they are martyrs to a power which holds them in relentless grasp.

If men who are sent out to shoot each other can find it in their hearts to be sociable across the trenches, only a few yards away, it ought to be easy for the people of this land, of peace and prosperity, to imitate their example.

It is perfectly natural for a group of men in the saloon where they gather as kindred spirits for companionship, to be social, and it is just as natural for a group of ladies to possess the same spirit at the card party and afternoon tea, but sociability means more than the saloon or the party, and it appeals to a multitude of people who are interested in neither.

The great thoroughfare is crowded with a busy throng struggling for a foothold and existence. This great mass of humanity represents all stages of success and failure. Some of the number are burdened with the weight of sorrow, while others are discouraged through misfortune, for which they are not always responsible.

You and I touch elbows every day with a fragment of this busy throng, and it is up to us to make the touch helpful. While it is not wise to have many intimate friends, it is well to cultivate the spirit of the thoroughbred Spaniel dog, and be friendly with everybody.

The bad things of life attract attention because they are so prominent, but the good things are far in the ascendency. There is so much to be thankful for that every heart should be filled to overflowing and the overflow should bring good cheer to all with whom we come in contact.

The author of "Bab's Ballads" was lunching the other day in the club room, when the boys called on him for a speech. They finally let him off if he would write a poem on life. And this is what he wrote on the back of a menu card. It contains some good homely philosophy:

"Life is but a fleeting bubble,
Full of sunshine, full of trouble,
Full of grief and full of gladness,
Full of goodness, full of badness,
Full of sin and full of virtue,
All depending on the choice you go to. Whether it's a place on Sunday That will stand the gaff on Monday. Life, I say, is full of sorrow—
Full of men who say tomorrow I will pay you that small sum, But tomorrow doth not come. Life is full of night and day—
Hip, hip, hip, hurrah, hooray!"

Too much attention is paid to the steeple jacks. Every time a steeple jack climbs a pole for the purpose of splicing a rope the newspapers talk it as a heroic feat. Climbing poles is a steeple jack business. If he were afraid to do it he would be in some other line of endeavor.

"Yes, pretty thing you know."

"Now you're flattering me. I think I look just horrid in it."
"Oh, you don't. Aren't you going to give this to Oldfield between two drivers whom the police would like to gain an acquaintance with. It is also reported that the two 'burned-up' road on North Washington street and down the street a pace not less than forty miles per hour. At that one of them was a Flivver car. They went so fast no one could get their number."

Temperance Talks

By Temperance Educational League.
No. 11. The Statement of Eight Hundred German Professors and Physicians.

During the recent wide spread discussion of the temperance question in Germany eight hundred professors and physicians issued a statement signed by them which was given publicity throughout the German Empire. It was made in plain language that everybody could understand. It has an educational value to the people of this locality and should be read by everyone. The statement is as follows:

"In view of the devastation caused by the constantly growing use of alcohol, the undersigned, representing the medical profession in the temperance movement, feel themselves bound to make the following public declaration.

"Science has shown that alcohol, even in moderate quantities, causes disturbance in the brain's activity, paralyzes critical capacity, power of will, the ethical and aesthetic sense, and lowers self-control. For this reason one should realize that it is a poison and no longer should be classified with foods.

Science has further shown that the continued use of alcohol lowers the body's power of resistance to all kinds of sicknesses, especially infectious diseases, and shortens life.

"Those who abstain wholly from all alcoholic drinks have a greater capacity for work and endurance in all sorts of intellectual and physical effort. They fall sick more rarely and are cured more quickly (especially from infectious diseases) than moderate drinkers."

"Every kind of physical and intellectual work is accomplished better with entire abstinence. All data to the contrary have been shown by exact proofs to be deceptive and due to the alcoholic paralysis of the judgment."

"The greatest danger, however, in the regular use of alcohol is the degeneration of the race. The progeny of the regular drinker inherit a generally inferior physique, especially a weakened nervous system. This danger has been increased more recently by the fact that women have gradually fallen more and more under the influence of the general drinking customs. So long as they did not drink the blood inheritance was at least half sound. Since the mothers of the coming generation have been attacked by this chronic poisoning, degeneration must proceed at a considerable quick pace."

"Drinking customs bring degeneracy, poverty, sickness, vice, crime, madness, and death and this not only to those who succumb to them. They also endanger those who personally have not yielded to them. Thousands die yearly because of the drunkenness of others. We recall the many accidents caused by drunkenness, derelicts on ships, wrecks, accidents on building in factory, workshop. We recall crime committed in drunkenness, the endless cases of assault and murder. We remember the hundreds of families who have been maltreated by drunken fathers. We recall the hundreds of thousands born sick and wretched, burdened with the passing down their misery to children and grand children. Therefore it is not only a duty to fellow men but incumbent on all to hold himself upright, to be sober, to be healthy, to be a drinker, and this by the personal example of abstinence."

"We are convinced that with the banishing of alcohol other causes of human misery will be easily suppressed, that abstinence would contribute essentially to the solution of the great social question."

COUNTY W. C. T. U.
HAD GOOD MEETING

Twenty Ninth Annual Session of Prohibition Society Held at Cut Off City.

The twenty ninth annual convention of the Rock county W. C. T. U. was held at the Baptist church of Evansville September 15, 16, of this week.

The program, which was printed in Thursday's Gazette, was carried out in detail. The leading features of the program were:

The address by the president, Mrs. Hoffman of Beloit, the temperance lecture by Rev. Bateman of Rockford, the reading of the Declaration of Independence by Rev. C. C. Johnson, a brief address by Rev. C. C. Johnson, and devotional services by Reverend Oliver of Evansville Baptist church.

The paper on the voice of the Crusaders of Other Days and the Present Day, by Mrs. Carrie Dresser of Clinton, touched the hearts of all.

Edgerton read a paper entitled "What I Saw at Rest Cottage," the vocal solos contributed by the talent of Evansville, the bass solo by Stanley Horwood of Janesville, also the drill by the children of Evansville, were enjoyed by all.

These and many others deserve credit for the protection of the community work planned and adopted for the ensuing year and the resolutions adopted will be printed in booklet form and distributed to W. C. T. U. members of Rock county, urging them to carry out the plans adopted.

The W. C. T. U. of Rock county extended their gratitude to Evansville for hospitality so generously given.

The aims of the convention were: To awaken all to the spirit of the "new nationalism" which includes nation-wide prohibition, and franchise women help those in distress when the heart must sore and keep no record of its bounty. "All done for God and home and everyland."

DEARTH OF MEDICAL MEN PROVES SERIOUS

Shortage of Physicians and Small Attendance at School Makes Problem One of Future.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Sept. 18.—The dearth of medical men in the United Kingdom is not only serious at present on account of the war, but it will be for years afterward, in the opinion of the Lancet, the organ of the British medical profession.

In a recent issue the Lancet says: "That our medical schools will go very short of students is certain, and this will mean a dangerously small list of medical practitioners to minister to the needs of the country in the near future. The position is inevitable. The spirit which will lead young men of the military age and the educated class to join the army must have this effect, but it is the duty of the medical profession to face the difficulty and to make the best of it."

The great work which the medical contingent with the navy and army has accomplished in the present war will not later as a stimulus to enthusiasm for our calling, and the shortage which must occur in our ranks for the three or four years following—say 1917, will speedily remedy a serious shortage of medical men for the years following the war. Not only has a large number of young men who otherwise would be beginning or pursuing their medical studies been absorbed, but, unfortunately, a serious toll was taken last autumn of those who, being already nearly qualified, would have been able to practice their profession as qualified men in a few months.

"The future will see an increased demand for medical men, and their numbers are steadily being depleted. The aspirants will assuredly be numerous. And there will be an improvement in the conditions which have prevailed in the past, not only because of the medical profession, but because of the record of the work of medicine throughout the war has been such that it must lead to a closer relationship between the medical profession and the public."

"The British public are taking a more intelligent interest in these things, and the energy with which lay bodies are working in co-operation with the medical profession in carrying out various schemes for the well-being of the people may be taken as an indication that the health of the nation will be a first consideration of the immediate future—which means that there will be a great demand for medical men at the close of the war. And this is the essential message to the students now in the schools. They are already wanted as qualified men, and in the near future they will be wanted even more urgently. It is a patriotic duty, imposed upon them by the conditions of the world, and they should spare no effort to pass all their tests in the shortest legal time, while by so doing they will reap the double reward of good citizenship and worldly success."

CHICAGO WARRANT FOR AGNES BAUMGART IS WITHDRAWN RECENTLY

It was learned this morning that one warrant issued by the Pinkerton detective agency of Chicago, has been withdrawn from the police department for the arrest of Miss Agnes Baumgart, the Detroit young lady who is now serving out an eleven months' commitment law sentence at the Rock county insane asylum under contract with Superintendent C. S. Whipple.

While this warrant was withdrawn, it is reported Sheriff A. O. Chamberlain has received one from the Pinkerton agency to take its place. Chief Chamberlain at present holds a warrant from the Kenosha police for the girl's arrest when her time is served out and Sheriff Chamberlain has a warrant charging forgery from the Waukesha authorities. It is also said the sheriff has several others, but the officials at the jail are not revealing where and how these warrants were received.

The commitment law sentence imposed upon the girl swindler is completed the middle of February, counting one-quarter good time off. There have been reports that the "bad accounts" left by Miss Baumgart from the Pacific coast, and Wisconsin are being settled by her parents, but so far there has been no inclination to make void the present warrants by which she can be arrested when her sentence is served out.

GRAIN DELIVERIES HALTED BY RAINS

Slow Market is Reported Here on Account of Unfavorable Weather Conditions.

On account of unfavorable weather conditions and heavy rains which have prevented farmers from making deliveries, the local grain market has been slow this fall and prospects are not particularly bright. Early activity in the market has been limited to about forty or fifty bushels of corn.

Much of the crop is discolored by the rains and there is little first grade malt barley available. Corn in this section will not be more than half a crop on account of the backward season and unless frosts hold off for at least a month the crop may be a failure. There is little old corn on the market and prices on it are soaring to prohibitive figures.

RAESSLER TAKES CORN SWEEPSTAKES

Beloit Boy Awarded Clean Sweep in Corn Exhibit—Corn Ripe Enough For Dry-Seed House.

Noyes Raessler of Beloit, won sweepstake prizes on corn at Wisconsin state fair, exhibiting the ripest samples of corn in the entire exhibit. This was accomplished only after years of careful selection, for a fixed type, consisting largely of early maturing qualities and productiveness. The bad weather conditions were overcome by the selection of the best ears.

The varieties on which Mr. Raessler concentrated his efforts are known as Golden Glow, and Silver King. Both of which are leaders in Wisconsin as well as many other states.

The beautifully shaped ears which were developed by this simple system of selection stood out more prominently than ever at the 1915 fair, and proved an interesting exhibit to the thousands of farmers who visited the County Exhibit Building this year.

Dr. DeLoach, who judged the exhibits, pronounced Mr. Raessler's corn ripe enough to go into the dry house for seed. This will probably be one of the few corn crops to escape the frost this year.

SAYS SPOILS SYSTEM HAS LEFT WISCONSIN

John Hazelwood Gives Assurance That Old System Will Never Return—Wants Civil Service Aid.

Oconomowoc, Wis., Sept. 18.—That the spoils system has gone from Wisconsin probably never to return was the assurance of John A. Hazelwood, secretary of the Wisconsin civil service commission, at a convocation of the Wisconsin Civil Service Reform league today, attended by national and state leaders in the reform movement. The assembly was held at the summer home of John A. Butler of Milwaukee, known as "Crooked Lake Farm." Mr. Hazelwood spoke on "The Merit System and Exemptions."

"There is no danger of Wisconsin directly resorting to the old policy of the spoils system again," he said. "The danger lies in efforts to undermine and impair the administration of civil service in the state. It is of this fact that we need give serious consideration to aid the civil service commission in its work."

Wisconsin has a well established policy of civil service in connection with the employment of public servants. A trial for a decade in the state's activities of the merit system has firmly fixed the principle.

Discussing exemptions, the speaker said the legislators should give little attention to a study of the merit system, and fail to appreciate the far reaching injury to public service which would result from placing certain positions outside the civil service provisions. He paid tribute to members of the Wisconsin Civil Service Reform league for aiding in preventing the enactment of the law during past sessions of the legislature.

"Their letters, briefs and arguments presented before the committee of the legislature," he said, "so persuaded the false arguments of the proponents of the law that the success crowned their efforts and the merit law of the state remains intact."

Efforts to tear down the law are three more concrete than the most radical treatment is necessary to limit the number of successful efforts. Statesmen in general are in accord with the true spirit of the merit system.

SUPERIOR GRAIN ELEVATOR ESTABLISHES WORLD RECORD IN UNLOADING OF CARS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Superior, Sept. 18.—A new world record for unloading grain was established at the Superior Great Northern elevator. In four hours and twenty-three box cars were unloaded in thirteen and one-half hours. The mark has never been approached, A. E. Clark, superintendent of the Great Northern elevators in Superior, declared. The former world's record was also held by the Great Northern elevator in the world's largest steel grain elevator in the world, last fall, when one hundred and eighty-eight cars were unloaded in ten hours. The new record is an average of thirty and twenty-two cars per hour for fourteen hours. The former record was twenty-eight and eight-tenths cars for ten hours.

CHINESE PRESIDENT STRIKES HARD BLOW AT NEPOTISM METHODS

Peking, Sept. 18.—President Yuan Shikai, in a recent statement, struck a hard blow at nepotism, which is so thoroughly entrenched in the Far East because of the devotion to family and the belief that caring for relatives is the best means of paying proper respect to ancestors. He said: "I have never allowed my relatives to enter into government service because I have strong reasons to believe that to them, especially if they have no experience or proper qualifications, would only serve to convert them into parasites or dependents. To show favor to one's relatives or friends is purely a personal matter and should not be done at the government's expense."

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"The Money Master," founded on Cleveland Moffett's famous stage success, "The Battle," is the latest product of the George Kleine Studios to visit the Myers Theatre Wednesday, Sept. 22, matinee and evening.

"The Money Master," at Myers Theatre Next Wednesday.

Not often is one privileged to witness a film drama of such absorbing interest, so well told or featuring a cast of such superlative excellence. Frank Sheridan, long and favorably known to the theatre-going public, plays the lead of the film, "The Money Master," supported by such well known players as Paul McAllister, Fania Marinoff and Malcolm Duncan. This aggregation of Broadway stars is probably the most pretentious ever seen in a single film.

The story is a rare blending of riches and poverty with many scenes taken in the famous East Side Ghetto district of New York. Haggleston, an ambitious man of millions, loses his wife and son through his mania for riches and years later discovers his long lost son in the tenement districts of New York. How he misses his yacht, spreads the rumor that he is away on the seas and then starts life over as a helper in the ghetto bakery, without so much as a penny in his pocket, merges in the picture his theory that riches are solely the result of work, are scenes of intense human interest.

In addition to the "Money Master," the beautiful Kleinette pictures will be shown Wednesday. These pictures were taken before the war and show Europe at its best. They are hand-colored and are really handsome.

"The Money Master" is told in five parts.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Orrin Johnson in "Fighting Bob." "Fighting Bob" is a title which might suggest either a filibuster, a college athlete fond of pugilism, a fellow always looking for a scarp of the kind or another, or a chap who fights for a principle. But in the case of "Fighting Bob" in the screen play of that name, Bob is a fighter in a double sense. He joins the army to fight against the revolutionists.

Orrin Johnson in "Fighting Bob" at Myers Theatre Thursday, and he fights also for the protection of his sweetheart, who has been kidnapped by the leader of the opposition. In both love and war, Bob displays great energy, perseverance and ability, so in the end he is acclaimed president of the republic, and wins the girl for his wife. This strong play of intrigue, military interest and romantic charm, will be released by the E. A. Rolfe company on the Metro programme at the Myers Theatre on Sept. 23, 24, matinee daily at 2:30. Evenings, 7:30 and 9:00.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"The Little Brother of the Rich." On Sunday afternoon and evening Myers theatre will present Hobart Bosworth in the five-act picturization of "The Little Brother of the Rich," by Joseph Medill Patterson.

Hobart Bosworth, a noted star and producer, is ideally fitted for the part he takes in this very interesting story and play. It is a Broadway universal feature and the public is assured of an excellent production throughout. From now on Manager Myers will present a high class picture program every night in the week. Showing diversified program, he aims to show pictures of the highest order.

the pictures right where the manuscript stated. "The Shadows of a Great City" is a vibrant, stirring, and the situations are such as to arouse the intense enthusiasm that goes with rapid, active dramatic climaxes, that touch home with the average auditor. The plot is one well remembered by the older theatregoers as having been popular many years ago. Its unconventional theme, the surprising finish and many little tangles not reckoned with by the onlooker, constitute a most formidable play.

Thomas Jefferson and Adelaide Thurston, two prominent dramatic is crazy about the movies and insists nevertheless for the stage. She is taking a vacation, just at present after working out "The Tomato Surprise," her new six reel laugh producer in which she pulls the stunts enumerated above.

"Yes," she remarked, "those stunts are a little hard on the nerves, and I've accumulated a number of bruises—but there was an awful lot of fun in making the picture. In one scene I'm supposed to be pushed through a brick wall. Naturally we built that wall with watery mortar, not expecting it to stick together very much. But something intervened and we couldn't take that particular scene on the afternoon the brick wall was constructed. The next day when we came to filming it, we found the mortar had dried—and I want to tell you that it was a mighty hard brick wall that I was rammed against."

Miss Dressler is a great movie booster and is advising all her stage friends to take up the work. She had a private exhibition of her new film at the Gledy Farns hotel, White Plains, recently, and invited William Courtenay and his wife, Virginia Harned, Louise Dresser, Ethel Barrymore and a host of other stage stars to witness the film. All through the evening she was as nervous as if she was going through the "first night" of a real stage show.

Forcing Vegetable Growth. Experiments with forcing vegetable growth by electric lights have shown that flaming arc lamps produce the best results, as they give off carbonic acid gas, a natural plant food.

SOUTHERN BELLES

CREATE A BIG HIT

Vaudeville Offering at Apollo is Unusually Good.

Seldom is it the good fortune of Janesville vaudeville patrons to witness as high class an act as the Six Southern Belles which is being presented at the Apollo this week. The act is made up of six charming and daintily gowned young ladies and their director, Earle Hopkins.

The girls sing, dance and play beautifully, each one an artist. Miss Norma Hopkins is an accomplished violinist. Her mastery of that instrument excited great comment. The Moran sisters are very clever dancers while Ruth Warren as cellist and Pay McKairhan as pianist delight with their playing. The soloist, Inez Bellaire, a musical comedy star, won several encores.

The balance of the show is composed of three more acts. Ethlyn Clark quite won the hearts of all with singing. She has several changes of costumes all of which are attractive. The audience was loath to let her go off the stage.

Restivo played the piano accordion as only Italians can play it, and when he instilled a bit of dancing and burlesque he "pulls down the house." La Vigne and Astor have a singing, dancing and piano offering hard-ly of the same nature as the rest, though they won their applause.

SUNSET OF RILEY'S CAREER FAR DISTANT

ISLE OF MAN GOVERNMENT IS IN A SORE PLIGHT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Sept. 18.—The Isle of Man, which has enjoyed home rule since ancient times, is in such an economic quandary that a proposal to ask the imperial government that the island be annexed to the County of Lancashire was recently considered in the House of Keys, the legislative assembly of the island. The member who moved the resolution declared that the island faced "imminent starvation and bankruptcy owing to the bungling and incompetence of the present island administration."

The motion for annexation was formally seconded and two other members were in favor of it, but the proposition was eventually lost and the island continues for the present under its own government.

The Isle of Man is one of the favorite resorts of thousands of Lancashire cotton workers and other factory employees, and is practically dependent on visitors, who pay a small poll tax towards the upkeep of piers and harbors. This year, however, the fast seasons have been withdrawn, and only one slow water boat makes a trip daily. Many hotels and boarding houses are closed. Three of the finest hotels shelter only one visitor each.

Find Roosts in Chimneys.

Swallows, after a day spent in skimming the air and catching insects, will seek a roosting place at night. The chimney swift soars about until after sunset and then suddenly darts into some chimney. These birds have very sharp-pointed claws and cling on the sides of the sooty flues.

AT THE APOLLO.

On Tuesday the five-part William A. Brady photoplay showing Robert Warwick in "The Face in the Moonlight," will be shown at the Apollo Theatre.

Robert Warwick is the bright particular star of the photoplay and has an enormously powerful part to undertake. He has the support of such experienced screen heretics as H. Cooper Cliffe and Montague Love. Stella Archer makes her first appearance on the screen with Robert Warwick in "The Face in the Moonlight."

The action of the play takes place in France at the period of the first French empire. Napoleon has just come into supreme power, he is heard of in the photoplay, but he is not seen.

Magnificent costumes and settings, allied with good photography, make this feature a pleasing offering to the eye; the cast and acting as well as the story constitute Robert Warwick in "The Face in the Moonlight," a singularly powerful costume play.

Robert Warwick has a dual role in the drama—he plays the parts of two half brothers; one an aristocratic young soldier, the other a degenerate villain and murderer. The aristocrat is wrongfully accused of murder, and pardoned by Napoleon. Robert, the actual criminal, goes at last manfully to the scaffold. There is a strong pathetic love interest.

AT THE APOLLO.

Violet Hemming in "The Running Fight."

"The Running Fight," which will be shown at the Apollo on Wednesday, featuring Violet Hemming, tells the story of a continual fight on the part of a girl to free her father of a charge of which she believes him innocent but who has deliberately wrecked a large trust company and placed the ill-gotten gains in her name. She knows nothing of it until after a long, weary fight, and after learning of the true facts of the case before the daughter does and he does what he knows is right.

It makes a most interesting story and will make an interesting play.

IF YOU ARE AMBITIOUS TO BE A "MOVIE" STAR TRY THE FOLLOWING STUNTS

New York, Sept. 18.—Supposing you were built on rather generous lines—about six feet or so, athletic and fairly well horizontally—supposing so, how would you like to: Be pushed through a brick wall. Be yanked into the air on a steel cable. Be rolled under the open spigot of a molasses keg. Jump from a culvert onto the top of a moving freight train. Fall from the top of a moving train into a little boy's arms. Marie Dressler, comedienne, does all these things and a lot of other slighter, less bone-breaking stunts in her new movie—and likes them. In fact, she

MINNEAPOLIS WINS GAME BY SCORE 5-4

Billy Sullivan Umpires and Eddie Garrity Catches.—About Five Hundred See League Exhibition.

Both good and real rotten baseball features were shown in the Minneapolis-Cleveland American association teams Friday afternoon at the fair grounds. Minneapolis through out a victory by the score of 5 to 4.
The attendance was nearly five hundred and a few were up from Beloit to see Eddie Garrity perform behind the bat.

As usual, Garrity, with the "home folks" looking on, failed to comb off a scratch single and made one bad "bull" in throwing to first base. When the first strike was coming in to cover the short field for a punt. But outside of this Garrity showed the fans some fancy catching and was the life of the Minneapolis fans. When the umpiring for the umpires, Eddie was on his toes
"calling" the old times, and even Al-tizer, who has played ball so long it is useless to count up the years, for their blunders. Cleveland started with their manager, Knight, on the mound, and when he went back to short and Hill went to the mound and was something of a real ball player. While there were lots of bum plays, there was plenty of sparkling catches to keep the spirits of the five hundred awakened. One thing sure, one could notice the way the leaguers handled the ball in throwing, for some of the pees made yesterday were good enough to make for the mistakes on grounded balls.

Cleveland scored one in the third inning when Altizer made his first hit, and in an overthrow by Hill in the fourth. Knight, playing for clear to third before he could be headed off. Massey singled and scored the run. In the fifth the Milwaukee fans, subject to a few caustic remarks by "Pongo" Canton, were out and grabbed off four runs when Engel bunted safely and on the out of Holland, third to first, he went clear to second. "Dixie" Hill, playing for his attempt to slide, he swallowed about a peck of perfectly good Rock county loam, but this did not interfere with his piling. Knight, booted Hoffman, grounder and Hoffman kicked over Altizer's liner down third, allowing the run to score. On an overthrow by Wood the third run counted, Roudon going clear around the bases on the error.

Cleveland tied the count in the sixth when Altizer's error got the Milwaukee in trouble after Nixon had struck out. The score stood 5 to 4 in favor of the home team. The inning was over but not far enough to allow the umpire to see the decision. Hoffman walked and Deal came through with the clutch that scored the run.

Everything was airtight until the tenth, when Smith singled and Cubby Williams drove out a safe one, leaving Smith at third. Altizer stepped to the plate and broke up the game with a clean drive. Summary:

Quid pro Quo.

It was his blessing that had done it; up to then she had controlled her feelings in a fashion worthy of the title just bestowed upon her. If only he had stopped at that, and kept his blessing to himself! It sounded so very much more like a knell than a bell. But she had begun first to laugh, and then to make such a fool of herself (as she herself reiterated) that she was obliged to run away in the worst possible order.

But that was not the end of those four superfluous words of final benediction; before the night was out they had solved, to Blanche's satisfaction, the hitherto impenetrable mystery of Cazalet's conduct.

He had done something in Australia, something that fixed a gulf between him and her. Blanche did not mean something wrong, much less a crime, least of all any sort of complicity in the great crime which had been committed while he was on his way home. But she believed the worst he had done was to emulate his friend, Mr. Potts, and to get engaged or perhaps actually married to somebody in the bush.

There was no reason why he should not; there never had been any sort of kind of understanding between herself and him; it was only as lifelong friends that they had written to each other, and that only once a year. Life-long friendships are traditionally fatal to romance. They had both been free as air; and if he was free no longer, she had absolutely no cause for complaint, even if she was fool enough to feel it.

All this she saw quite clearly in her very honest heart. And yet, he might have told her; he need not have flown to see her, the instant he landed, or seemed so overjoyed, and such a boy again, or made so much of her and their common memories! He need not have begun begging her, in a minute, to go out to Australia, and then never have mentioned it again; he might just as well have told her if he had or hoped to have a wife to welcome her! Of course he saw it afterward, himself; that was why the whole subject of Australia had been dropped so suddenly and for good. Most likely he had married beneath him; if so, she was very sorry, but he might have said that he was married.

Curiously enough, it was over Martha that she felt least able to forgive him. Martha would say nothing, but her unspoken denunciations of Cazalet would be only less intolerable than her unspoken sympathy with Blanche. Martha had been perfectly awful about the whole thing, and Martha had committed the final outrage of being perfectly right, from her idiotic point of view.

Now among all these meditations of

"I Guess I'm Not Fit to Speak to You," He Said.

a long night, and of a still longer day, in which nobody even troubled to send her word of the case at Kingston, it would be too much to say that no thought of Milton Toye ever entered the mind of Blanche. She could not help liking him; he amused her immensely; and he had proposed to her twice, and warned her he would again. She felt the force of his warning, because she felt his force of character and will. She literally felt these forces, as actual emanations from the strongest personality that had ever impinged upon her own.

In the day of reaction, such considerations were bound to steal in as single spies, each with a certain consolation, not altogether innocent of comparisons. But the battalion of Toye's virtues only marched on Blanche when Martha came to her, on the little green rug of a lawn behind the house, to say that Mr. Toye himself had called and was in the drawing-room.

Blanche stole up past the door, and quickly made herself smarter than she had ever done by day for Walter Cazalet; at least she put on a "dressy" blouse, her calling skirt (which always looked new), and did what she could to her hair. All this was only because Mr. Toye always came down as if it were Mayfair, and it was rotten to make people feel awkward if you could help it. So in sailed Blanche, in her very best for the light of day, to be followed as soon as possible by the silver teapot, though she had just had tea herself. And there stood Milton Toye, chin blue and collar black, his trousers all knees and creases, exactly as he had jumped out of the boat-train.

"I guess I'm not fit to speak to you," he said. "But that's just what I've come to do—for the third time!"

"Oh, Mr. Toye!" cried Blanche, really frightened by the face that made his meaning clear. It relaxed a little as she shrank involuntarily, but the compassion in his eyes and mouth did not lessen their steady determination.

"I didn't have time to make myself presentable," he explained. "I thought you wouldn't have me waste a moment if you understood the situation. I want you to promise to marry me right now!"

Blanche began to breathe again. Evidently he was on the eve of yet another of his journeys, probably back to America, and he wanted to go over engaged; at first she had thought he had had news to break to her, but this was no worse than she had heard before. Only it was more difficult to cope with him; everything was different, and he so much more pressing and precipitate. She had never met this Milton Toye before. Yes; she was distinctly frightened by him. But in a minute she had ceased to be frightened of herself; she knew her own mind once more, and spoke it much as he had spoken his, quite compassionately, but just as tersely to the point.

"One moment," he interrupted. "I said nothing about my feelings, because they're a kind of stale proposition by this time; but for form's sake I may state there's no change there, except in the only direction I guess a person's feelings are liable to change toward you, Miss Blanche! I'm a worse case than ever, if that makes any difference."

Blanche shook her yellow head. "Nothing can," she said. "There must be no possible mistake about it this time, because I want you to be very good and never ask me again."

Toye accepted his fate with a ready resignation, little short of alacrity. There was a gleam in his somber eyes and his blue chin came up with a jerk. "That's talking!" said he. "Now will you promise me never to marry Cazalet?"

"Mr. Toye!"

"That's talking, too, and I guess I mean it to be. It's not all dog-in-the-manger, either. I want that promise a lot more than I want the other. You needn't marry me, Miss Blanche, but you mustn't marry Cazalet."

Blanche was blushing. "But this is simply outrageous—"

"I claim there's an outrageous cause for it. Are you prepared to swear what I ask, and trust me as I'll trust you, or am I to tell you the whole thing right now?"

"You won't force me to listen to another word from you, if you're a gentleman, Mr. Toye!"

"It's not what I am that counts. Swear that to me, and I swear, on my side, that I won't give him away to you or anyone else. But it must be the most solemn contract man and woman ever made."

The silver teapot arrived at this juncture, and not inopportunistly. She had to give him his tea, with her young maid's help, and to play a tiny part in which he supported her really beautifully. She had time to think, almost coolly; and one thought brought a thrill. If it was a question of her marrying or not marrying Walter Cazalet, then he must be free, and only the door of some dreadful deed!

"What has he done?" she begged, with a pathetic abandonment of her previous attitude, the moment they were by themselves.

"Must I tell you?" His reluctance rang genuine.

"I insist upon it!" she flashed again.

"Well, it's a long story."

"Never mind. I can listen."

"You know, I had to go back to Italy."

"Had you?"

"Well, I did go." He had slurred the first statement; this one was characteristically deliberate. "I did go, and before I went I asked Cazalet for an introduction to some friends of his down in Rome."

"I didn't know he had any," said Blanche.

"Why, he doesn't have any," said Toye, "but he claimed to have some. He left the Kaiser Fritz the other day at Naples. I guess he told you?"

"No, I understood he came round to Southampton. Surely you shared a cabin?"

"Only from Genoa; that's where I took the steamer and Cazalet regained her."

"Well?"

"He claimed to have spent the interval mostly with friends at Rome. Those friends don't exist, Miss Blanche," said Toye.

"Is that any business of mine?" she asked him squarely.

"Why, yes, I'm afraid it's going to be. That is, unless you'll still trust me—"

"Go on, please."

"Why, he never stayed at Rome at all, nor yet in Italy any longer than it takes to come through on the train. Your attention for one moment!" He took out a neat pocketbook. Blanche had opened her lips, but she did not interrupt; she just grasped the arms of her chair, as though about to bear physical pain. "The Kaiser Fritz!"

Toye was speaking from his book—"got to Naples late Monday afternoon, September eighth. Seems she was overdue, and I was mad about it, and never got away again till the—"

"Do tell me about Walter Cazalet!" cried Blanche. It was like small talk from a dentist at the last moment.

"I want you to understand about the steamer first," said Toye. "She waited Monday night in the Bay of Naples, only sailed Tuesday morning, only reached Genoa Wednesday morning, and lay there all of forty-eight hours, as these German boats do, anyhow. That brings us to Friday morning before the Kaiser Fritz gets quit of Italy, doesn't it?"

"Yes—I suppose so—do tell me about Walter!"

"Why, I first heard of him at Genoa, where they figured I should have a stateroom all to myself, as the other gentleman had been left behind at Naples. I never saw him till he scrambled aboard again Friday, about the fifty-ninth minute of the eleventh hour."

"At Genoa?"

"Sure."

"And you pretend to know where he'd been?"

"I guess I do know"—and Toye sighed as he raised his little book. "Cazalet stepped on the train that left Naples six-fifty Monday evening, and off the one timed to reach Charing Cross three-twenty-five Wednesday."

"The day of the m—"

"Yes. I never called it by the hardest name, myself; but it was seven-thirty Wednesday evening that Henry Craven got his death-blow somehow. Well, Walter Cazalet left Charing Cross again by the nine o'clock that night, and was back aboard the Kaiser Fritz on Friday morning—full of his friends in Rome who didn't exist!"

The note-book was put away with every symptom of relief.

"I suppose you can prove what you say?" said Blanche in a voice as dull as her unseeing eyes.

"I have men to swear to him—ticket-collectors, conductors, waiters on the restaurant-car—all up and down the line. I went over the same ground on the same trains, so that was simple. I can also produce the barber who claims to have taken off his beard in Paris, where he put in hours Thursday morning."

Blanche looked up suddenly, not at Toye, but past him toward an overladen side-table against the wall. It was there that Cazalet's photograph had stood among many others; until this morning she had never missed it, for she seemed hardly to have been in her room all the week; but she had been wondering who had removed it, whether Cazalet himself (who had spoken of doing so, she now knew why), or Martha (whom she would not question about it) in a fit of ungovernable disapproval. And now there was the photograph back in its place, leather frame and all!

"I know what you did," said Blanche. "You took that photograph with you—the one on that table—and had him identified by it!"

Which country has Noodle drawn?

Complete the picture by drawing a line through the dots. Begin at No. 1 and take them numerically.

"It was the night I came down to bid you good-by," he confessed, "and didn't have time to wait. I didn't come down for the photo. I never thought of it till I saw it there. I came down to kind of warn you, Miss Blanche!"

"Against him?" she said, as if there was only one man left in the world.

"Yes—I guess I'd already warned Cazalet that I was starting on his tracks."

And then Blanche just said, "Poor—old—Sweep!" as one talking to herself. And Toye seized upon the words as she had seized on nothing from him.

"Have you only pity for the fellow?" he cried; for she was gazing at the bearded photograph without revulsion.

"Of course," she answered, hardly attending.

"Even though he killed this man—even though he came across Europe to kill him?"

"You don't think it was deliberate yourself, even if he did do it?"

"But can you doubt that he did?" cried Toye, quick to ignore the point she had made, yet none the less sincerely convinced upon the other. "I guess you wouldn't if you'd heard some of the things he said to me on the steamer; and he's made good on every syllable since he landed. Why, it explains every single thing he's done and left undone. He'll strain every nerve to have Scruton ably defended, but he won't see the man he's defending; says himself that he can't face him!"

"Yes. He said so to me," said Blanche, nodding in confirmation.

"To you?"

"I didn't understand him."

"But you've been seeing him all this while?"

"Every day," said Blanche, her soft eyes flitting suddenly. "We've had—we've had the time of our lives!"

"My God!" said Toye. "The time of your life with a man who's got another man's blood on his hands—and that makes no difference to you! The time of your life with the man who knew where to lay hands on the weapon he'd done it with, who went as far as that to save the innocent, but no farther!"

"He would; he will still, if it's still necessary. You don't know him, Mr. Toye; you haven't known him all your life."

"And all this makes no difference to a good and gentle woman—one of the gentlest and the best God ever made?"

"If you mean me, I won't go as far as that," said Blanche. "I must see him first."

"See Cazalet?"

Toye had come to his feet, not simply in the horror and indignation which had gradually taken possession of him, but under the stress of some new and sudden resolve.

"Of course," said Blanche; "of course I must see him as soon as possible."

"You shall never speak to that man again, as long as ever you live," said Toye, with the utmost emphasis and deliberation.

Dinner Stories

"The professional fire-fighter," says the chief of a fire department in New England, "is too frequently faced to face with danger to regard fires in an aesthetic light, but the feelings of an amateur with a passion for 'running with the machine' occasionally shows an epicurean flavor."

"While running to a fire in a large town in Rhode Island, one man overtook another, who was going in the same direction."

"I hope," gasped the last-mentioned, out of breath, "I hope it ain't the stove-lining works. I've seen that twice already!"

The rehearsal had gone not at all to please the stage director, who, at its close, severely and unjustly criticized the leading man. In conclusion he said: "Say, do you think I have been a stage director for fifteen years for nothing?" "I can not say as to that," answered the actor suavely, "but if you haven't you have cheated the management."

The hero-worshipping young girl was buttering about the soldier just returned from the war. "They tell me," she said, "that in times of danger you were as cool as an iceberg." "I should say I was," said the young soldier. "Why, I was so cool I actually shivered."

A STORY OF SUFFERING

Told by a Janesville Man.

Here is a story of severe suffering that many people go through day by day without relief. But way endure it? Read Mr. Wright's words, and you will realize that much suffering does not have to be endured. Proof of merit like the following is what you have been looking for.

A. S. Wright, railroad engineer, 321 No. Chatham St., Janesville, says: "The jarring an engineer gets is mighty hard on his back and kidneys, so it's no wonder I began to feel that something was wrong. My kidneys acted irregularly. I had severe back aches and pains across the small of my back. It hurt me to get up or down. Almost all railroad men know about Doan's Kidney Pills so, of course, I used some, too. In a short time they put a stop to all the pains and made my kidneys act as they should."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Wright had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y.

Be Sure You're Right,
Then---

"Go your limit," says Herman Landerman, in his story, told on another page of this issue, of how he has built up a lighting fixture business in ten months.

When he and his partner bought the business they thought it needed regular, constant and attractive newspaper advertising to extend its scope.

They felt sure they were right, so they went ahead. They began advertising every Thursday in a paper, and in ten months they had increased the business from $5,500 to $8,000.

There is always a right way and a wrong way, but sometimes it is puzzling to be sure of the right one.

That is what called into existence the business specialist.

He is the natural outgrowth of a serious need: the man whose finger is constantly on the pulse of public events, desires and opinions; the man who sees YOUR situation and YOUR problem from the proper and necessary perspective.

YOU can't view the situation in your own business comprehensively, from all angles—you are too close to it.

You need the perspective of the business specialist.

It is FOR YOU that we maintain our staff of them.

Let us serve you.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Sept. 18, 1875.—The front of Miner's shoe store is receiving a coat of paint. South Main street is brushing up considerably this fall. Poor people can live well this winter as potatoes are abundant and can be purchased anywhere for 20 and 35 cents a bushel. The harvest frost was seen this morning. The night was clear and cold and was an auspicious time for the coming of old Jack. At 7 o'clock this morning the thermometer stood at 40 degrees above zero. Dr. N. W. Nolan, editor of the Catholic Vindicator, Milwaukee, paid us a visit this morning. The doctor has done much in using the Vindicator to promote the cause of temperance in this state. Emerald Grove has furnished our market with the largest arapies we have ever seen in Janesville. Atlanta, Sept. 18.—An engine on the Cherokee railroad ran off the track last night and killed the fireman and injured several persons.

18 HEAD OF HOGS
10 head of registered pure bred Duroc Jersey boars (spring pigs); 8 head of registered pure bred Duroc Jersey sows (spring pigs).

The reason I am selling these cows is that I have purchased a herd of registered cattle in the east and want to sell my grades; I am also overstocked with pure bred Duroc pigs, and the horses are not my kind.

VIOLATE NEUTRALITY IF ALLIES GET LOAN

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE TAKES SLAP AT NATIONAL ADMIN-ISTRATION'S ATTITUDE.

SCORES MONEY KINGS

"What Do Morgan and Schwab Care
About Peace When There Is Profits in the War?" Asks Bader Lawmaker.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Sept. 18.—"With our manufacturing interests extending enormous credits to the allies, with our money interests committed to keep the bonds of the allied governments good, we are underwriting the success of the war. The allies have ceased to be neutral in fact as well as in name and are no longer 'it and free to do what is honest and disinterested and serviceable for the peace of the world.'"
This is the message which Senator Robt. M. La Follette announced today in a signed article on the front page of his Madisonian. The editorial is entitled "Neutrality" and opens with a quotation from President Wilson's solemn appeal to the people of this country to refrain from any act or word which might inflame passion or provoke distrust on the part of any belligerent nation. He points out that the people approved of the president's course and hailed it as a noble conception.

Raps Financiers.
"But when you can boom stocks 500
percent in manufacturing munitions and pay to support the war on the side, to the bottomless pit with neutrality," says Senator La Follette.
"What do Morgan and Schwab care
for world peace when there are big profits to be made?"

The stocks of a dozen corporations—among them some of the most important concerns—have been boosted by war orders since January. Five hundred million dollars above their highest value before the war. The stocks of the Schwab properties, which stood at the market value of seven million dollars before the war, are now worth more than $10,000,000.

"Of course these manufacturers are supplying war materials to one side and the other in the interest of neutrality." They urge that if we were to cease exporting munitions of war it would contribute to the advantage of the side that is better prepared to supply itself and hence, as a neutral nation, it becomes our bounden duty to see that the other side is supplied with shot and shell.

Instruments of Murder.
Senator La Follette says that under the criminal code and by every principle of good morals, he who supplies the weapon, knowing that it will be used to kill, is equally guilty with him who makes it the instrument of murder. He declares that the manufacturer of death-dealing devices upon the orders of belligerents engaged in slaughtering the fellow man, cannot altogether escape the responsibility that goes with the bloody business.

And now we are about to engage in purchasing the allies funds with which to prosecute their side of the war, continues the senator. "It seems Britain and difficulty in selling in its own country the obligations of the government to enable it to raise money with which to buy more munitions of war. Mr. Morgan and his friends who control the bankers—who control the deposits of the thrifty people of our country—are arranging to supply several hundred millions of gold American money to England and France, taking as security therefor the bonds of the governments seeking the loans.

Lord Reading's Dope.
"Lord Reading, head of the visiting committee to secure the loan, gave out to the dear public in New York that it is their desire to use these neutral American millions to stabilize exchange and make possible the movement of food stuffs from this country. Of course there was an innocent stare in the monocled eye of Lord Reading, which was turned toward the reporter who was giving this dope to the public. But we tancy that about the time he was working off this 'food-stuffs' proposition, his Lordship winked the other eye at Morgan."

"How long can we maintain a sensation of real neutrality while we are supplying the allies with munitions of war?"

"With the financial power of this country loaning hundreds of millions of money upon the bonds of the allied governments, even when the masters of American capital and credit can wield will be put forth not only to 'stabilize exchange' but to stabilize the governments whose securities they hold."

To the Mayor, Chief of Fire Department and Citizens of Janesville:
This is to express the deep gratitude and keen appreciation of the citizens of Evansville for the will and the aid offered by the Mayor, Chief of the City of the Janesville department Friday night in our hour of need.
To know that the very ef-

efforts of our men brought untold strength and courage to them and deep gratitude to our citizens.

Very respectfully,
BYRON CAMPBELL,
Mayor of Evansville.

Evansville, Sept. 18.—A fire loss, amounting to about $20,000 was sustained here last night by the Paulson lumber company, in one of the wickedest fires ever seen in this city.
Shortly before seven o'clock pedestrians noticed smoke rising from the lumber piled at the east end of the yards. The local fire department was summoned, and efforts were made to check the spreading flames that surrounded the section, including the Baker Mfg. company, that lay not far distant. The Janesville department was called, but by nine o'clock another call was sent to the Evansville City that the fire was under control.

The cause of the fire was spontaneous combustion, workmen having been dipping shingles in linseed oil during the day. Insurance to the amount of $20,000 covers over half the loss. The Muenchow residence nearby was afire a short time, but little damage was done.

The Ladies Aid society of the M. E.
church entertained the young people of the church and public school teachers at a dinner last night. The church was very attractively decorated for the occasion, and all report
a very pleasant time.

Youths Build Lighting Fixture Business On Advertising

DEVELOP $5,500 BUSINESS INTO $8,000 IN TEN MONTHS.

Advertise Every Thursday in Daily Newspaper.—Use no Other Medium.

(By Andrew L. Demling).

"In advertising, goods, isn't entirely a question of quality. There are certain standard makes in each line that we all sell, but the man who sells the most is the man who becomes established as the one who can offer those standard makes at the most reasonable price."

"The buying end of this business was pretty well devised and established when we took it over. The problem which presented itself, and which we have solved, was the one of making ourselves sufficiently well known to overcome a wide and keen competition."

Shows the Answer: Newspaper Advertising.

Herman Landreman, the decidedly youthful proprietor of the Chicago lighting fixture establishment that takes its name from its location on Washington street, disappeared in a dark cloud of mystery and returned with a newspaper in his hand.

"That was the problem. Here is the answer," he continued, turning to an attractive display, showing an array of gas and electric shower fixtures.

"People will be bringing in this Thursday and clipping literally well into the middle of next week, and Friday and Saturday will care for the hardest effort and best speed we are capable of."

Advertises Every Thursday Year Round.

"One would think then, that Thursday advertising would get to be a habit," we ventured.

"That's just it," he returned. "We have advertised every Thursday since we took over the business. Of course, during special or holiday seasons, we do it oftener."

"You see, this business was established about twelve years ago and while Mr. Schwartz, the original owner, built up a very comfortable business out of it, its growth during recent years hasn't been what we thought we could make it."

My partner and I had worked in wholesale fixture houses since we were old enough to work, always with the idea of eventually buying a place of our own.

After we became friends we were more than ever determined to make an early start, and to make it a partnership affair.

"So while we saved, we were studying planning and watching for an attractive opening."

Determination and Advertising Make Strong Combination.

"My partner had worked for Mr.
Schwartz and we began planning
how we could expand this business."

"I had a good, though modest patronage, people who bought here faithfully from one year to another.
Our idea was to branch out after new business."

"The place had been advertised,
but not regularly, faithfully, everlastingly, as it seemed to us was necessary."

"We bought the place with the determination to make its name a fix-ture in Chicago's advertising columns.
We figured that, both of us being young and full of determination and activity, and a leaning toward hard work, together with the force of the years of study we had given the business, and our thorough realization of the value of newspaper advertising, we might expect to make a go of it."

"Feeling reasonably sure we were right, we went our limit."

Business Grows from $5,500 to $8,000
in 10 Months.

"It was a $5,500 business when we bought it last November. Today it is $8,000 and we have invested
$2,000 in newspaper advertising."

"Have you used any other mediums?"

"I should say not. Just the same that newspapers are necessary to us, so are they the only mediums that get us anything."

"Because we were such dyed-in-the-wool advertising enthusiasts, we started out, and because some few who had been in this work a lot longer than we have, called us extravagant and predicted disaster, it still makes us feel kind of proud every Friday, when they begin coming in asking for the kind you advertised yesterday, and when we see the difference between our crowded rooms and the open shelves of the who said 'advertising didn't do any good in this particular business.'"

Reach Contractors Through Newspapers.

"Is this then, entirely a retail business?"

"No, our retail and wholesale business are about equally divided."

"And that is another thing, we reach our contractors and wholesale trade through the newspapers, too."

"While of course our work and acquaintance in the wholesale and of the business had a value in bringing a certain amount of it with us, our newspaper advertising is increasing our wholesale trade constantly, steadily and rapidly."

And he indicated a portion of his advertisement intended for the contractor.

Styles in Fixtures Change Rapidly.

"No an apartment dweller, whose bulbs are renewed as fast as they break or wear out, and who knows absolutely nothing about the fixture business, it is hard to realize that people are renewing and buying new fixtures all the time, to an extent, to support establishments like yours."

"Yes, and not only these stores, but the department stores and all the other kinds that sell fixtures," he added.

"But styles in fixtures are fleeting,
as in everything else.
